

The push for policies like Medicare For All, the Green New Deal and a $15/hr minimum wage are just a few of the core issues that fuel the rise of the resurgent Left in the Western world. But the United States is where these calls to action are the most prominent, due to the massive problems within society caused by deeply-buried systemic inadequacies. While most of the Progressive platform on the whole is largely supported by the majority of Americans, the fiscal contradictions and omissions have caused a rift in perception with regard to these policies, enabling the economic and political power structure to more successfully mount a counterargument against this type of change than they would otherwise have been able to do. Fortunately, this counterargument is mostly hollow and based in irrational fear and greed than anything else and isn't working as well as The Establishment would like it to. But there has still been this vacuum that exists within the framework of the overall discussion, and that's where The Package Deal comes from. It takes many of the core Progressive issues and combines them into one single bundle with all the financial details feeding off of and contributing to each other, making for a sound and viable economic and political strategy.

The Package Deal consists of:

- Medicare For All
- $15/hr minimum wage
- Green New Deal
- Abolition of Private Prisons
- Legalization of Marijuana, Gambling and Sex Work
- Systemic promotion and incentivizing of Strong Unions & Worker Cooperatives
- Progressive Tax Reform
- Universal Basic Income
- Economic Bill of Rights
- Economic Reorganization
- Constitutional Amendments to get money out of politics & restrict U.S. war powers while mandating legal ramifications for war criminals and humanitarian criminals at all levels of society, including the President

This not only highlights how all these policies are interconnected economically and socially, but it also illustrates how the U.S. can reshape its economic infrastructure to fulfill the needs of all the people, and save money doing it. On a side note, once Resolution H2O is initiated in the U.S., the ability to print money will be expanded to the point where budgeting won't be nearly as much of an issue as it is now. But for the time being, we are working with a national debt totaling $21 Trillion and climbing. This is chiefly due to the hoarding of assets by corporations and wealthy elites in offshore tax havens, which as part of Economic Reorganization and Progressive Tax Reform will completely crack down on such acts of Grand Theft and Money Laundering. So without further adieu, here is how The Package Deal breaks down:

MEDICARE FOR ALL:

This policy is actually quite simple. The entire healthcare system is publicly funded and everyone is covered for all their healthcare needs, and because there is no more profit-seeking middleman there is much less of a risk of corporate Price Gouging. The misnomer in this issue is that this is a "Government Takeover" of Healthcare in America. The reality is that it is a "Public" takeover of Healthcare, which reduces the Government's role in this matter to being nothing more than the intermediary between the people and the companies, doctors and hospitals that make up the Healthcare field; and because the entire Government body in this case is comprised of elected officials, the responsibility falls on their shoulders to abide by the will of the people and properly attend to their duties if they want to keep on representing their constituents. The net savings is generated through the absence of private insurance premiums, copays and deductibles, which makes Healthcare free at the point of service, as the entire system is funded through a Progressive Tax system. The clear and present danger is the inevitable attempt to sabotage the Healthcare system through deliberate and calculated neglect from a Government that sees Healthcare as it is now: Just another business opportunity where people are not people, but mere profits. This is why in the Economic Bill of Rights, Healthcare is constitutionally guaranteed as a basic human right, and due to the anti-repeal clause at the beginning of this bill, Healthcare - along with the rest of the Basic Commons - cannot be taken away once the bill becomes part of the Constitution. Three key studies conducted in the last year have shown a net national saving from anywhere between $2 Trillion and $17 Trillion over a 10-year period. The most recent study, done by the University of Massachusetts Amherst concluded a net saving of $5.1 Trillion over that same 10-year period. Part of maximizing the net savings is to promote and emphasize healthy eating habits, exercise, work-life balance, and ensuring the country's natural resources are purged of contaminants used by Corporate America which are poisoning the public at a record rate. Over time, as these preventative measures roll out and people become healthier, the net savings on Healthcare increases. Obviously, the goal with the three fore-mentioned estimates is to reach the highest amount of savings possible, being $17 Trillion. So, how do we reach this goal? We start with the $15/hr minimum wage.

$15/HR MINIMUM WAGE:

All things considered, $15/hr is not enough to match the level of inflation that has resulted in the astronomical cost of living in the U.S. According to the most recent data, at the rate of inflation over the years, if Americans were actually making a living wage, the rate would be an estimated $21/hr. That said, the $15/hr minimum wage is the starting point to get to where wages need to be in order to ensure every American can live in comfort and dignity, which through a Progressive Tax system, the jobs provided through the Green New Deal, the Economic Bill of Rights, the banning of the use of offshore tax havens, the emergence of more unions and worker cooperatives and Resolution H2O (The Hydrodollar system), the ultimate goal of both a living wage and Universal Basic Income becomes more and more feasible through the ripple effect of each interconnected facet of American life as they continuously interact with each other. The mechanism that can catapult this vision into reality is, of course, The Green New Deal.

GREEN NEW DEAL:

If I had to identify the single most prevalent reason some in the U.S. still don't agree to a Green new Deal, it would be Culture Shock. America has been dependent on fossil fuel for nearly a century and a half at this point and so many in fossil-fuel-producing areas have grown up knowing nothing other than that. One of the biggest arguments coming from Coal Country, for example, is the issue of jobs and the potential displacement of fossil fuel workers as a result of a Green New Deal. This is a notion that has long since been disproven as countries like Norway, Iceland, Germany, Netherlands and China are rapidly moving towards de-carbonizing their energy systems. A combination of new Green Energy companies - including unionized companies and worker cooperatives - and existing fossil fuel companies that work to change their business model from one dependent on fossil fuel to one of Green Renewable Energy is how this undertaking begins at ground level. On top of reconstructing the current energy system, we have the means to reconstruct our current economic system in relation to the Energy infrastructure, which over time will yield not a net savings for Americans, but net profits as the energy being generated is coming not from greedy privateers, but from Nature. Germany has been using a similar economic model where residents that have solar panels on their homes and get their power from the Sun actually sell the excesses to power companies, offsetting and in some cases saving on the cost of housing in the long run. This same model can be used with regard to wind and hydroelectric power methods, which when used in combination with other alternative renewable energy methods, creates the amount of competition in the Energy industry to keep energy costs as low as possible, and because of the anti-monopoly clause in the Economic Bill of Rights, energy companies and profiting residents need not worry about tyrannical industry consolidation by major corporations. Alongside the Energy industry, we also have the Infrastructure issue, which has received a grade of D+ from a recent UN study. Part of dealing with this problem involves a constitutional amendment that restricts U.S. war powers and imposing mandatory disciplinary action against all war criminals and humanitarian criminals, including war profiteers. Following this would come a redirection of professional focus in the existing MIC companies, as well as promotion and incentivizing of more unions and worker cooperatives to help rebuild and, whenever possible, upgrade the crumbling infrastructure. Roads, bridges, sewage systems, building refitting for Green and Renewable Energy consumption and generation, and the detoxification of natural resources. All this, in tandem with the institution of the Hydrodollar system results in a healthier, cleaner, and prosperous American society that benefits each and every single person. The gray area in this case is the differentials between expenses, savings and profits with not just private companies, but domestic homeowners profiting from Green Renewable Energy as well. Because we are not yet at the point where we can collect the data to make the next move beyond the theoretical, this is a bridge we will have to cross when we get to it. But one thing we can take into account is the end of corporate subsidies, which already saves taxpayers billions a year that can be redirected towards other programs, such as the refitting of formerly-private prisons into medical centers that run on Green and Renewable Energy.

ABOLITION OF PRIVATE PRISONS:

Currently, the Private Prison industry is taking a hit from the Banking industry as consumers (and investors) are divesting from banks that fund the Prison Industrial Complex. Even with this positive movement, a constitutional revision is needed to eliminate the clause of the 13th Amendment that still permits Slavery “as a punishment for crime whereby the parties shall have been duly convicted.” Once this happens, there will no longer be Slavery in any form within the United States to be considered legal, either through direct legislation or through loopholes in existing laws. This saves taxpayers billions a year in subsidies which would then be redirected towards the funding of the Green New Deal and Medicare For All, further reducing the increase in the price tag of the entire package. The other part of this equation is the legalization of Marijuana, Gambling and Sex Work nationwide.

LEGALIZATION OF MARIJUANA, GAMBLING & SEX WORK:

While still something of a trio of controversial issues, these three facets of society have been around about as long as the concept of Trade has been around. It's been said that the three industries that will never go away are Drugs, Sex, and Alcohol. While Gambling is not bodily toxic, the psychological effects can reach the levels of those of an alcoholic or drug addict. That said, these endeavors are personal choices and are not designed to harm anyone. By legalizing these areas, not only are we allowing for more avenues to generate profits and contribute to the overall economy, we're also eliminating more reasons to incarcerate people, which frees up even more space in the formerly-private prison system, making way for more development of medical facilities where people can have more locations available for medical treatment, including treatment for Addiction, as well as the amount of jobs that result from this trio of legalizing Marijuana, Gambling and Sex Work. And we can't overlook the jobs that would be created through Medicare For All in relation to this as the need for doctors, nurses, pharmacists and other specialists will also be rectified. Gambling is already legal in Nevada, New Jersey, Maryland and parts of West Virginia. It's best to legalize it nationwide, as it is something that millions of people - particularly sports fanatics - enjoy engaging in all the time. It also adds to the Tourism industry across the country, providing revenue for other areas, possibly even as part of a Basic Income program with more unions and worker cooperatives coming into the fray where there are no outside shareholders to worry about. Instead, the proceeds can be used to start a UBI program, fund part of Medicare For All, fund part of the Green New Deal, or any array of other programs. As for Sex Work, physical intimacy is a natural part of being human and there is literally no reason for it to be outlawed. This is more of a practical stance than anything else, but one can also say it has a certain moral quality to it. Obviously, most people hold certain values like the sanctity of marriage sacred and would never participate in such an industry. But this measure would not be to force it onto those people, but to protect those who would like to partake in said industry. It adds to the overall economy and gives those who would seek sex work as a means of generating revenue a pathway to that goal. Humans are often more sexually ambiguous than societal conditioning leads us to believe and this would give such individuals a sense of personal freedom and liberty, reducing the stress that comes from economic restrictions such as those currently placed on these respective industries.

PROMOTION AND INCENTIVIZING OF STRONG UNIONS & WORKER COOPERATIVES:

It's no secret that roughly 93% of the employment opportunities in the U.S. today are comprised of traditional hierarchical business models, where those at the bottom of the pyramid have basically no rights and Corporate makes all the decisions that guide the company in a given direction. This, along with the constant lobbying by Corporate America in Washington (Corruption) has led to the completely lopsided economic landscape that we now have. On top of the trustbusting to come with regard to Big Tech, Wall Street Banks, Fossil Fuel companies et al., there has to come with it the right to unionize and collectively bargain for higher wages. The Right to Unionize and Collectively Bargain is Article 2 in the Economic Bill of Rights, so with the institution of this bill, workers are officially protected, via Constitutional Amendment, from the tyranny of Big Business. This keeps workers free from being persecuted by employers, should they decide to form a union. Then we come to Worker Cooperatives, which are essentially democratically-run and organized professional entities. With Worker Cooperatives, there is a much better balance of power and a more adequate distribution of the company's profits with regard to actual production. This automatically gives workers more say in company decisions and ensures better compensation for their work, forcing traditional hierarchies to compete with the higher wages and more balanced lifestyle. And of course, with the institution of Medicare For All, companies no longer have to worry about offering health benefits through greedy, price gouging middlemen (Private Insurance companies), so that frees up millions in profit to be hashed over democratically by the co-op. Ultimately, this puts more money in workers' pockets which they can then contribute to the greater economy, generating more municipal, local, state and federal revenue, depending on how these organizations decide to be structured. In cases where union companies and worker cooperatives don't have shareholders, the proceeds could be used in part to begin institution of a Universal Basic Income - particularly if Green Energy jobs are community-owned worker co-ops and the energy in those communities is nationalized, resulting in the excesses being redistributed to the residents as part of a UBI program (similar to what Alaska does with its oil and mineral wealth).

PROGRESSIVE TAX SYSTEM:

Regardless of financial distribution, it only makes sense for the bulk of the tax revenue to come from where the majority of the national wealth is concentrated. In a Progressive Tax system, the tax brackets are portioned out in a numerically sensible way, sometimes with incentives built into that system with extremely high marginal tax rates, which are tax rates that incentivize using as much of the excess profits as possible once it hits a certain point to invest in workers and company conditions. Doing this can count as deductions, which lower the effective tax rate (the amount of taxes actually paid). Either way, it's the majority of Americans who benefit from this type of tax code, and while the wealthiest Americans may not like having to part with some of their excesses, it does reduce the risk of the workers and consumers coming after them with the torches and pitchforks, as they will have little-to-no reason to do so. Numerically, even today, the lowest income earners do pay the least amount in taxes, while most of the top earners pay the majority of taxes. But there are still those who avoid taxes altogether; namely, the top 1%, including multinational corporations. In a Progressive Tax system, corporations and wealthy asset hoarders would be banned from using offshore tax havens, lest they risk prosecution for Grand Theft and Money Laundering, and in cases of direct blackmail, Grand Larceny. Part of this tax overhaul is to regain the $21 Trillion in U.S. assets stored in offshore tax havens, which would immediately erase the national debt and serve as a cushion to kick-start various programs included in The Package Deal. Because of the fact that 75% of Americans make $30,000/year or less, most of this $21 Trillion would be used to start The Package Deal as a means of minimizing tax increases as much as possible. But from that point on, the tax table would resemble something like this:

| Net Annual Income | Marginal Tax Rate Per Capita | Effective Tax Rate Per Capita | Taxable Income |
|-----------------------|------------------------------|-------------------------------|----------------|
| < $100,000 | 5% | -5%/+5% | 5% |
| $100,000 - $500,000 | 15% | -15%/+15% | 10% |
| > $500,000 - $1M | 25% | -25%/+25% | 15% |
| >$1M - $10M | 35% | 0/+35% | 15% |
| >$10M - $50M | 50% | 0/+50% | 25% |
| >$50M - $100M | 65% | 0/+65% | 25% |
| >$100M - $500M | 75% | 0/+75% | 35% |
| >$500M - $1B | 90% | 0/+90% | 45% |
| >$1B | 100% | 0/+100% | 50% |

This chart illustrates a rough layout of what a Progressive Tax system looks and functions like. The more money you have, the higher both your taxable income and marginal tax rate will be. This is a tax code that incentivizes the wealthiest income earners to recontribute to the society they have so gratuitously profited from, and in the process, save proportionately on taxes each year. And as we can see from this chart, once you hit above that $1M mark, no more returns. At this point, there is no reason for taxpayers to subsidize someone earning over $1M a year. By definition, such an individual does not have to worry about relying on a tax return to help make ends meet. Of course, this system is subject to shifts in demographics as wages and UBI are adjusted for inflation. But since a very small portion of Americans earn more than $1M, let alone $1B, those high tax rates aren't going to affect but maybe 10% of Americans at best. But this brings into question the concept of Universal Basic Income. If UBI becomes a reality, what's the point of having such a high Progressive Tax code to pay for the many social welfare programs that will become superfluous?

UNIVERSAL BASIC INCOME (or SOCIAL SECURITY FOR ALL):

As the name suggests, Universal Basic Income is essentially a guaranteed basic income for all American citizens, age 18 and older. It is meant to sustain people in times of otherwise economic downturn, which always happens in economic activity. At present, this is the reason for the existence of the many social welfare programs we have today. Unfortunately, they are far too frugal as it is and are often undermined by Capitalist elements that act to keep the well-being of the people tied to the dictations of the wealthy elites. What UBI does is sever that interdependency and allows not just every American to live with comfort and dignity, but it eliminates the rationale for having to save for retirement, taking that stress off the shoulders of American citizens. It also provides a baseline to both accommodate for the relative Cost-of-Living and offers a little extra to invest in one's own future as they see fit. Partly funded through a Progressive Tax code, as well as the proceeds generated from community-owned and operated outlets for Green Energy, Broadband et al. as these organizations would not have shareholders, so the energy and the internet in these communities would be nationalized, resulting in partial funding of a UBI program. The other part of this equation is the fact that all other welfare programs would be scrapped, as UBI eliminates the need for them, and because it is "universal", every American citizen is a recipient of it, which is also guaranteed as a Basic Common Right under the Economic Bill of Rights. There can be an option to forego one's UBI as part of the tax return process. Many still feel that UBI is somehow "immoral" or "unethical", and this is purely a personal position. So while UBI is a guaranteed Right under this bill, if some people are not comfortable with this arrangement, they can choose to opt out of the UBI program on an individual and annual basis. There is a growing debate about UBI as to what constitutes an acceptable amount to allot to citizens, so as to keep them able to make ends meet, yet still incentivizes them to work. The number one argument against UBI from the Right is that it will make everyone lazy and everything will simply stop running. The problem with this analysis is that this is already happening, but not from laziness; rather from a lack of opportunities, perpetrated upon the American people by the private Capitalists who sought to maximize profits by cutting labor costs, usually done through outsourcing and/or automation. Automation is the elephant in the room that has yet to be properly addressed because it is the one thing that can permanently displace any given group of workers. This is where the need for UBI becomes self-evident. Another factor that illustrates the need for UBI is Inflation. Wages often do not increase to match inflation because the Capitalist enterprises are forced to pinch pennies in order to compensate, just as consumers are forced to do the same, which causes a snowball effect of compounding problems that lead to an economic crash. The best way to ensure these lulls in economic activity don't lead to the sacrificing of human life (which Capitalism treats as a mere commodity) is Universal Basic Income. The range of disputed allocation for UBI is anywhere between $1,000/month and $5,000/month, depending on what the cost of living is in a given area. But this is where National Rent Control becomes an important part of the discussion because this affects not just workers and consumers, but the private Capitalists as well. By instituting a National Rent Control along with UBI, you not only cut the cost of living to a more manageable level, you also ensure that the people have stable and sustainable purchasing power in order to meet their needs, despite the current economic climate.

The best way to ensure that UBI becomes a reality - as well as a basic human right - is through The Economic Bill of Rights.

ECONOMIC BILL OF RIGHTS:

Throughout America's history, nothing has been held more sacred than the Bill of Rights, which establishes all the basic rights of not just Americans, but of all people. Over the last few decades, however, the Constitution (including the Bill of Rights) has been perceived as passe as the U.S. began to discard its responsibility to uphold the Constitution and the rights of each and every individual in its keep. Over the last 40 years, it hasn't been the Constitution and the Bill of Rights that have been the guiding force in America's culture; it has been the dictations from the world of Business...which is not beholden to the public welfare, unlike the Government is through the Constitution. This is why, as part of The Package Deal, there is to be introduced an Economic Bill of Rights which will protect all consumers and workers from the tyranny of Big Business. It is essentially the checks and balances on the mechanisms of Capitalism so that society doesn't fall apart. Only by binding Capitalist enterprises to the public welfare through Constitutional Amendment can we ensure the well-being of each and every individual in our keep. Often, the forces of Capitalism wields far more power than that of any Government, which when left to get to the extreme, becomes a system known as Fascism. On the flip side, when an otherwise manageable economic system becomes unstable and starts to fail, the other force that has historically taken hold is that of Communism. As history has consistently shown, neither of these extremes are very effective ways to guide the economic systems of any country, let alone an entire world. Right now, the world is seeing numerous Fascist-oriented strongmen appear in positions of government power in response to the failing mechanisms of Capitalism. So rather than allow things to go the ways of Fascism or Communism, The Economic Bill of Rights essentially forces the governing forces of the economic system to put the people first. Here is the Economic Bill of Rights:

UNITED STATES BILL OF BASIC ECONOMIC RIGHTS

This bill is binding to the United States Constitution and is not subject to alteration or elimination through legislation, executive order, or judicial mandate. These Rights are hereby recognized as inalienable, unconditional, and everlasting.

- 1. All people, be they United States citizens or otherwise, now and for always, have the Right to a basic standard of living to include Sustenance, Shelter, Clothing, Healthcare, and Education.*
- 2. All people, be they United States citizens or otherwise, now and for always, have the Right to individually and collectively bargain for desired compensation for their services without retaliation from their employer, business affiliates or otherwise mutually invested counterparts.*
- 3. All people, be they United States citizens or otherwise, now and for always, have the Right to pursue professional, financial and economic growth, except in cases where such growth is proven to be damaging to others.*

4. All people, be they United States citizens or otherwise, now and for always, have the Right to clean food and water. Any and all parties guilty of infringing on this Right shall be appropriately addressed through due process of law.
5. All people, be they United States citizens or otherwise, now and for always, have the Right to clean, breathable air. Any and all parties guilty of infringing on this Right shall be appropriately addressed through due process of law.
6. All people, proven to be United States citizens, now and for always, have the Right to form unions and worker cooperatives without retaliation from otherwise economic counterparts, such as pyramid-structured companies, corporations or other profit-driven entities.
7. All people, proven to be United States citizens, now and for always, have the Right to a Basic Living Income. This income is separate from the otherwise serendipitous economy and is not subject to provision through taxation. This income is to be, by law, adjusted for inflation to ensure the basic standard of living for all United States citizens.
8. All people, proven to be United States citizens, now and for always, have the Right to a quality Education. Methods of providing Education for Non-U.S. citizens shall be appropriately addressed by Congress as circumstances dictate.
9. All people, proven to be United States citizens, now and for always, have the Right to remain free of appropriation of their land by the Government, companies, corporations or otherwise financially-opportunistic individuals. Legal territorial boundaries may only be determined by official declaration agreed upon by mutually invested parties.
10. All people, be they United States citizens or otherwise, now and for always, have the Right to be free from the mass consolidation of power in a given industry or market. Corporate mergers may not exceed the total of three companies. Any corporation or other profit-oriented enterprise proven to have absorbed more than two competing entities must be broken up within six months or risk total forfeiture of all assets, to then be distributed in a public trust for final disposition through a public referendum.

ECONOMIC REORGANIZATION:

With taxpayer dollars being used to now fund Medicare For All, part of The Green New Deal, Universal Basic Income, and eventually Education, a complete overhaul of the entire economic infrastructure is needed in order to minimize taxation until the Hydrodollar system is finally instituted, which will greatly expand the ability to print money on an as-needed basis without resulting in Inflation or Debt as it is a Resource-Based system. Along with the programs of The Package Deal comes a new publicly-elected position for each state that gives the public a seat at the economic table by way of a U.S. Public Treasurer; a position which will be concurrent with that of President of the United States (4 years). This representative is responsible for ensuring the financial and economic areas of society are serving the best interests of the people. This individual will be working alongside the Chairperson of The Fed, as well as reporting to the respective finance and economic committees of the U.S. House of Representatives. Because this official is not chosen by the President and approved by the Senate, he/she does not directly report to the President or the Senate Finance Committee. He/she does, however, join in on the presidential and senatorial discussions regarding finance and economics so as to give the people a fully accountable voice among those who are too often operating without being held accountable. And with the pending 28th Amendment that will get money out of politics, this official can be more easily held to account if he/she does anything wrong. In the event this official is found to be guilty of a crime and is impeached and removed from their post, the U.S. House Judiciary Committee will set a date for a new election for the Public Treasurer. If the House Judiciary Committee does not set a date for a new election within one month of the Convicted being removed from office, the date will automatically be set by default to the next election date in the coming November. Should this deadline fall within 6 months of the election in November and no candidate has entered the race, the U.S. Supreme Court will set a date for a special election. With the institution of Medicare For All, it's equally important to have a public voice in the room on matters of Health and Human Services. This is why the second new elected position will be the U.S. Public Health Advocate. Like the U.S. Public Treasurer, this position will be an elected position and this individual will be accountable not to the President, but to Congress. This individual will be working alongside the U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services as their equal, providing a public voice to a discussion centered around Privately owned and Public domains with regards to Healthcare. To ensure that Medicare For All functions properly, we need a representative who is wholly accountable to the public through a 4-year election term, concurrent with that of the President of the United States. For the election process with regard to the Public Treasurer and the Public Health Advocate, there will be put forward a process to determine these positions through Ranked Choice Voting. The process for Impeachment and a special election will be the same as it is for the Public Treasurer. Accompanying the breakup of the major Wall Street Banks will come an initiative to turn as many of these splinter banks as possible into Publicly-owned and operated banks, from which the citizens who use these banks will be the beneficiaries of their profits, resulting in another part of the funding of a Universal Basic Income program. Next is the matter of the companies that will emerge as a result of the Green New Deal. Every Publicly-owned and operated company, including Worker Co-ops, will see the citizens who utilize their services the beneficiaries of their profits, resulting in another part of the Universal Basic Income program. As is clear from the previous two outlines, the Public are the shareholders in cases of Public companies. Taking it a step further, there is a method used in Germany where the people who have Green Energy efficient houses actually sell off the excesses to private energy companies as well as other public energy companies, and because the public companies have no shareholders, that benefit defaults to the public. In other words, the municipal, local and sometimes State Energy companies and Banks are strictly beholden to the people. Resulting in a more diverse economy, this strategy and rollout process forces Private companies to compete and keep their prices down. Finally, with the institution of the Hydrodollar system, everything is in place to ramp up efforts on the Green New Deal and bring our country (and planet) back to prosperity.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

Along with the Economic Bill of Rights, two more constitutional measures are needed to ensure the end of the Military Industrial Complex, as well as close the revolving door between Washington and Wall Street forever. The two amendments to be proposed are as follows:

WALL STREET ANTI-TRUST ACT

The United States of America, including all subsidiary states and territories, hereby recognizes the abolition of Citizens United and every other current and future form of legislation designed to enable the influence of special interest compensation in determining U.S. policy, both foreign and domestic. This article is binding to the United States Constitution and is not subject to alteration or elimination through legislation, executive order, or judicial mandate.

ARTICLE I

Section I: No bank, public or private, shall permit nor authorize the existence, sale or trading of the Mortgage Backed Security, Collateralized Debt Obligation, or any other surnamed financial product to be traded on the stock market that could potentially result in the ruination of any part of the American or global economy.

Section II: No government nor any publicly elected official, municipal, local, state or federal, shall permit nor authorize the existence of financial market products that could potentially or inevitably result in the ruination of any part of the American or global economy.

Section III: No government nor any publicly elected official, municipal, local, state or federal, shall be permitted to exercise a Revolving Door Policy, by which said government officials enter any field for which they are bound by law to oversee and regulate. All public officials found Guilty of participating in the Revolving Door Policy shall forfeit their office and be subject to punishment as prescribed by a jury of peers under due process of law. If said official or group of officials are those holding office through public elections, said offices will have special elections held during the upcoming month of November if said office or offices are vacated at least six months prior, during which time before the election, the next subordinate in the official chain of command will assume the duties and responsibilities of said office or offices. If said official or group of officials are appointed, the ranking official shall be charged with replacing the guilty party' post as prescribed by the legal charter of the affected municipal, local, state or federal legislature.

Section IV: No financial professional who has worked in the private financial sector shall be permitted to exercise the Revolving Door Policy, by which said professional enters into any public election. Such practices result in an inevitable Conflict of Interest and any and all such practices are hereby deemed illegitimate and, if exercised, punishable by law.

Section V: No government official, municipal, local, state or federal, elected or appointed, shall favor legislation that endangers the constitutional rights of United States citizens, legal or illegal aliens.

Section VI: Punishment by law, as determined by the prescribed constitutional voting process in the House of Representatives, United States Senate, and Presidential Signature, is to be determined by a jury of peers through due process of law.

Section VII: No government official, municipal, local, state or federal, elected or appointed, shall accept trade of any kind for personal gain, except through popular vote by a two-thirds majority of the jurisdictional constituency for passage. If said trade puts the American public welfare at risk in any way, the accused will be subject to impeachment and removal from office, and any other forms of punishment as determined by a jury of peers under due process of law.

Section VIII: No branch of government, municipal, local, state or federal, shall permit nor authorize passage of laws designed to alter or overturn other laws put in place to ensure the security and protection of the public welfare. Introduction and passage of such laws will result in immediate Public Endangerment and Corruption charges, impeachment, and a trial by jury to be presided over by a Justice of the Supreme Court to be determined by popular vote of the United States Supreme Court.

Section IX: In the event of a collaborative effort to perpetrate Public Endangerment and/or corrupt legislation by any one or more political parties for any reason, said parties, or collection of individuals accused within said parties, shall be subject to joint prosecution under due process of law, to include Public Endangerment and Corruption charges, impeachment, and potential removal from office. Should these proceedings fall within the timeframe of an election cycle, each of the accused shall not be permitted to run for reelection and Lame Duck status will be imposed.
